WHAT TO WOMAN READERS

AMERICAN FASHIONS.

BY LILLIAN YOUNG.

If brown happens to be one of your pet colors, you may indulge your fancy for it without any doubt as to its standing among fashionable colors. All shades are unusually favored this season, from the light fawn and golden tones to the dark rich tobacco and mahogany shades. In satins, suitings and velvets all the desirable shades are in evidence. One may readily imagine the pleasing possibilities that lie in the illustrated calling costume, through the medium of one of the leather tones. "Egskin" broadcloth is used here, worn with a dark brown skirt and small brown velvet hat with light plumes. Brown fox furs complete the color scheme.

Long sleeves are cut with extended shoulders, and to these the square-shaped blouse fronts are attached, slightly gathered at the top and outlined with a covered cord. The back is joined to either front at the under arm seam, but is set on to the shoulder yoke in the same manner as the fronts in a line running evenly across and slightly gathered.

The shaping of the front edges leaves a broad opening that is filled in by a glimpse of dotted net, with a turn-down collar and inside ruche at the neck. Small square, cord-finished tabs are set in above the girdle on either side of the front.

Besides the dark brown girdle and sash end of satin there is another sash end of emerald green and gold brocade velvet ribbon that gives a pleasing note of contrast. The sash ends serve to conceal the placket opening, along the sides of which the drapery of the skirt is disposed.

Long graceful folds are swung down the front and around the knees by lifting the material at the belt in even plaits. There is a curved slash over the foot on the left side and some of the extra length of that side is slightly draped below the hips.

It really is a difficult matter to describe clearly the draping of a skirt. Words are hardly adequate, and all those who understand dressmaking and desiring realize that there is only one way to reduce the best draperies, and that is by actually

TODAY'S HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS

By Mary Lee.

Dainty Dishes.

While daintiness food is not to be recommended as a steady diet, it is possible with the aid of a chafing dish to make tasty dishes from the store counter that will be nourishing as well. Any girl who owns a chafing dish wishes to give a little special to her friends spending the evening with her. She will find the combination of dish and daintiness a saving both in work and money.

The she has quite a list to choose from. She can serve meat, eggs, cheese, or fish in many delicious ways and finish off with such dainties as charlotte russe, ice cream, fruit, fancy crackers, nuts, or bonbons, not forgetting coffee or cocoa.

Meat With Eggs.

Cold roast beef or cooked ham may be used. Get the salesman to cut the meat in one piece instead of in thin slices. One-quarter pound of solid cooked meat will go quite a long way. To make put a little butter in the blazer and when not add the meat cut into dice. Stir until it begins to look crisp, adding pepper and salt to taste. Beat three eggs thoroughly and pour on to the meat. Stir well until the whole thickens. Serve hot with rolls.

Creased Fish.

Get a can of any preferred fish, as salmon, crab, lobster or shrimps. Open and place in a bowl for an hour or so before using. Make a sauce by cooking together equal quantities (about one tablespoonful) of butter and flour until they reach the bubbling point, then pour in a cupful of milk and stir until the sauce is smooth, white and thick. Now add the fish and season with pepper and salt. When the fish is thoroughly heated through stir in a little lemon juice and serve at once.

Roast Beef Warm.

Fry half a minced onion in a tablespoonful of butter, then add a small can of tomatoes, mashing any lumps until the whole is smooth. Season with pepper, salt and sugar. Allow this to become very hot, then lay in slices of cold beef and heat through.

Cheese Fonder.

Buy a quarter pound of grated cheese, eggs, milk and a fresh loaf of bread. Melt one tablespoonful of butter in the chafing dish, and add to it one cup of milk, then stir in a cup of fresh bread crumbs and the grated cheese. Add seasoning of pepper and salt, and cook until smooth. Next put in two beaten eggs and cook three minutes longer. This is served upon crackers or toasted bread.

Curried Eggs.

Fry a little sliced onion in a tablespoonful of butter. Stir into this a spoonful of flour and one teaspoonful of curry powder, or the latter in quantity to taste. When well blended, pour in one cup of hot water in which a bouillon cube has been dissolved (these cost 3 cents for one and are used in the quantity to taste). Next lay in four hard boiled eggs cut into quarters and cook five minutes longer. When the eggs are heated through, the dish is ready to serve.

Incidentally, any of the above dishes are nice as an after-theater lunch. Dainty stores are open very late, you know.

A PLANKING BOARD FOR SHAD OR STEAK

Only those who have eaten planked steak fully appreciate how appetizing it is. Like planked shad, it has many epicurians who praise its palatableness most highly.

Long ago it was discovered that a steak or shad could be planked in a hot oven when open fires were not available. The upper grating of the oven is used for this purpose.

Use a clean oak or hickory plank, about 2½ inches in thickness and of such a length that it will go easily into your oven. Grease it well with lard and set it in a moderate oven, taking it out occasionally to regrease it, gradually increasing the temperature of the oven, if possible, while you are giving the plank this treatment. Always grease and heat your plank before you put the article to be planked upon it. Rub your shad or steak on both sides with seasoning and abundance of butter. Lay the fish or meat on the hot plank and fasten it firmly into place with wire nails at the four corners do not drive these in too deeply, however, and lay the plank on the upper grating of the oven. Frequent basting is required every few minutes with butter until the planked article is done.

The winter rowns are trimmed with tinsel, blue, yellow or purple fox, skunk, tiger and leopard fur.

Mahogany Whipcord.

One of the season's smartest tailors makes appears in the drawing above. This is made of mahogany whipcord. The jacket front of the cutaway style, and the bottom line of this suit are turned and mounted to above the waist line at the side of the back, where it meets the straight back breadth which falls to below the hips. Two black silk ornaments are placed at the joining of side and back portions and one of similar style closes the front. The skirt laps well to the right side beneath a sash end of the skirt and terminating in a sash end of black satin, fringed and falling to the hem. The rolling reversers are also

YOUR OLD FURS.

This is a good year to make use of every bit of old fur you may have on hand. For it is a year when small touches of fur are much used. Day clothes, both for street and house, are trimmed with fur, evening gowns and accessories show it, and even underclothes are decorated with it. So trot out your old furs and see what you can do with them.

If you have a collar and muff set that is in fairly good condition, you can do much to rejuvenate it by means of a little color. Try lining the muff with say, bright green satin, and then fasten a big bow of green satin ribbon, to match the lining, on the collar. Or put a ruffle of colored chiffon in the ends of the muff and another under the ends of the collar.

Small pieces of fur that are in good condition may be made into snug little waistcoats to wear under the street suit coat. A pattern for waistcoats may be bought and the waistcoat cut of cotton cloth, fitted, altered, and the fur cut from the corrected pattern.

Fur is used on velvet hats. A strip of fur to line the crown of a velvet hat is a finish that is attractive. Fur bows, faced with colored silk or satin to match the lining of the muff and the bow on the collar, are also interesting.

Another use for old strips of fur that are in good condition is for neck ruffs of various sorts. Tulle can be pleated, wired at the edges and edged with fur. Or velvet ribbon four inches wide can be laid in small box plaits and finished with a band of fur through the center, tied snugly about the throat with ribbon ends.

Evening frocks of filmy texture—lace, chiffon, gauze and other thin materials—can be effectively trimmed with touches of fur. A chiffon or tulle tulle edged with fur, fur buttons on a lace bodice, a buckle and fur trim on a waistband on the skirt drapery—all these are interesting.

Dear Old Smiling Pool Once More.

Black Pussy was having a good time. Grandfather Frog wasn't. It was great fun for Black Pussy to slip a paw up Grandfather Frog and toss him up in the air. It was still more fun to pretend to go away, but, instead, to hide and the instant Grandfather Frog started off to pounce upon him and cuff him and roll him about. But there wasn't any fun in it for Grandfather Frog. In the first place he didn't know whether or no Black Pussy liked frogs to eat, and so he was terribly frightened. In the second place Black Pussy didn't always cover up her claws and they pricked right through Grandfather Frog's white and yellow waistcoat and hurt, for he is tender there.

At last Black Pussy grew tired of playing, and catching up Grandfather Frog in her mouth, she started along the little path from the spring to the Long Lake. Grandfather Frog didn't even kick, which was just as well, because if he had Black Pussy would have held him tighter, and that would have been very uncomfortable indeed.

"It's all over and this is the end," moaned Grandfather Frog. "I'm going to be eaten now. Oh, why, why did I ever leave the Smiling Pool?"

Just as Black Pussy slipped into the Long Lake Grandfather Frog heard a familiar sound. It was a whistle, a merry whistle. It was the whistle of Farmer Brown's boy. It was coming nearer and nearer. A little bit of hope began to stir in the heart of Grandfather Frog. He didn't know what it was, but it felt like a ray of light. Always he had been in the greatest fear of Farmer Brown's boy, but now—well, if Farmer Brown's boy should find him he might get away from him as he did before, but he was very sure that he never, never could get away from Black Pussy.

The whistle drew nearer. Black Pussy stopped. Then she began to make a queer whirring sound deep down in her throat.

"Hello, Black Pussy! Have you been hunting? Come here and show me what you've got," cried a voice.

Black Pussy arched up her back and heeled against the legs of Farmer Brown's boy, and all the time the whirring sound in her throat grew louder and louder. Farmer Brown's boy stooped down to see what she had in her mouth.

"Why," he exclaimed, "do believe this is the very same old frog that got away from me yesterday. You don't want him, Puss. I'll just put him in my pocket and take him up to the house by and by."

With that he took Grandfather Frog

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Luster With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

his pocket. He patted Black Pussy, called her a smart cat, and then started on his way whistling merrily. It was dark and rather close in that pocket, but Grandfather Frog didn't mind this. It was a lot better than feeling sharp teeth and claws all the time. He wondered how soon they would reach the house and what would happen to him then. After what seemed like a long, long time he felt himself swung through the air. Then he landed on the ground with a thump that made him grimace. Farmer Brown's boy had taken off his coat and thrown it down.

The whistling stopped. Everything was quiet. Grandfather Frog waited and listened, but not a sound could he hear. Then he saw a little ray of light creeping into his prison. He could see and pushed and all of a sudden he was out of the pocket. The bright light made him blink. As soon as he could see he looked where he was. Then he rubbed his eyes with both hands and looked again. Black Pussy was sitting on the ground at his feet. He was in Farmer Brown's house at last! Where do you think he was? Why right on the bank of the Smiling Pool, and a little way off was Farmer Brown's boy fishing. "Chugurum!" cried Grandfather Frog, and it was the loudest, gladdest "Chugurum" that the Smiling Pool ever had heard. "Chugurum!" he cried again, and with a great leap he dived with a splash into the dear old Smiling Pool, which smiled more than ever.

And never again did Grandfather Frog try to see the Great World.
